Promoting solidarity, respect and self-esteem through a countrywide network

Lead by the Centro para el Desarrollo de la Inteligencia (CDI), the Paraguayan delegation brings together young people from several different organisations that form part of the Red Paraguaya de Partidí (Paraguayan Partidí Network). 'Partidí' is an educational project which uses football to create a learning community among children and young people from diverse backgrounds. With the theme 'everyone plays, everyone wins', the network promotes solidarity, respect, self-esteem, gender equality and teamwork through football while developing players' critical thinking and creative skills.

All organisations involved use the 'Fútbol Callajero' (street football) method in their programmes, which involves applying special rules and rituals to the game that promote dialogue and responsibility, very similar to the rules at the Football for Hope Festival 2010.
